Dear Harold

I got your notes of June 15 & 29 today.

I'm GLAD I used the pen name Peter Morse. Just as I was an unknown quantity to PNS, so were they to me. They changed-up much of my story. Much of it was a pick-up from Chastain's last material for them. They called Ryan a "new" attorney. Further, I don't know that I can place any future stuff with them if I wanted to (also, payment is slight). For example, they told me they wouldn't use Weisberg alone saying Ray is political prisoner. I might get some quotes out of Livingston, but you might not like being coupled with him in a story.

If you can make out paragraph 7 of June 12 CA photocopy I sent you, you'll note Ryan DELIVERED the suit for Ray, but said he does not represent Ray in the case. I think I have the answer on the "Nashville attorney"; Ryan was very coy about who he might be. He's James Earl Ray (pro se).

James sent me a brief, non-commital reply on basic questions of his legal team. I wrote again, asking whether HE considered himself a political prisoner. No reply.

Keep in touch--as I will.

Best,

Pete
